MEMORANDUM FOR : Admiral Turner

FROM : Anthony A. Lapham
General Counsel

SUBJECT : Responsibilities of the DCI with Respect to the Intelligence Community

1. This paper discusses the legal basis for the responsibilities of the DCI with respect to the intelligence community, including the Director's relationship with the intelligence elements of DoD.

2. The primary source of the Director's authority and responsibility is the National Security Act of 1947, which established the National Security Council, CIA and the position of DCI. (It also unified the three armed services and established the Department of Defense, at that time designated by the Act as the "National Military Establishment"). The Act does not specifically associate the DCI with Intelligence Community agencies or with DoD intelligence units, several of the current ones of course not being in existence at that time. But under the Act it is the duty of the Agency to correlate, evaluate and disseminate intelligence and the agencies in possession of intelligence relating to the national security are to make it available to the Director for correlation, evaluation and dissemination. The Act also charges the Director with responsibility for protecting intelligence sources and methods information from unauthorized disclosure, a responsibility which the Act does not confine to the Director's position as head of CIA.

3. Through the years, the secondary source of authority regulating the relationship of the DCI and the Intelligence Community agencies has been the various National Security Council Intelligence Directives. In addition, Executive Order 11905 gives the Director certain authorities with respect to the Intelligence Community agencies. See at Tab A a copy of section 3(d) of Executive Order 11905 prescribing the authorities of the Director and, at Tab B, a copy of section 2(b) establishing and prescribing the authority of the Committee on Foreign Intelligence, of which the Director is the chairman. However, an amendment to this provision of the Executive Order to bring it into line with certain decisions by President Carter, is in process.
